WATTS HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING

The Two Faces of Miss W.S.N.

.....FOREWORD

We, as student nurses, assume greater responsibilities than the average young girl, for the lives of others are entrusted in our care. We are proud of this added responsibility and even though our young lives may be a little more complicated and our free time more limited, we have managed to fulfill our desire of leading the happy, satisfying life that the average girl seeks.

In carrying out our theme, the two faces of "Miss Watts School of Nursing", we hope to convey to you throughout our yearbook, in pictures and words, the two different lives we lead; that of the student nurse and the delightful young girl.

THE NIGHT NURSE

Among the sick, row on row
The light passes through the night.
Keeping vigil over one and all,
Rich, Black, Poor, and White.
A cry in the night---A comforting hand,
A pain so severe---has ceased,
A feeling of loneliness---A companion is near,
Filling the needs that are missed.
The light travels on, bed after bed,
Behind it follows the nurse.
What thoughts are there within her mind;
What fears accompany her journey?
The fear for safety of each one in her care,
The fear to do the right thing,
Fear to detect the abnormal sign,
And fear of knowing too little,
Fear of misinterpreting
Or overlooking the vital.
These things she ponders within her heart
As through the night she travels.
Never showing her worry lines,
They're written on her soul.
Never being selfish,
For in her hands, their comfort, she holds.
What call has beckoned her into this field?
What force has drawn her near?
The work, the worry, the wages-
I know not why I'm here.
. . . . . As dawn appears and all is well,
A sigh of thanksgiving is heard.
Her question is answered in a multitude of ways----
The sunshine, the gratitude, a bird.
She knows--yes, now she knows,
The force that's drawn her here.
Self-satisfaction, Love of Human Nature
And Faith in all mankind.

.....DEDICATION

We regret that we are not so fortunate as to know him personally because his greatness as a man is undoubtedly as supreme as his greatness as an administrative figure. His polite tip of the hat and "Good evening, Ladies", will be remembered by all of us as a sample of his friendly attitude. We are proud to be graduated from the hospital of which he is director and are equally proud of the tremendous work he has done toward the improvement of this hospital.

We, the class of 1959, dedicate this edition of the White Cap to the director of Watts Hospital. . . . . .

.....HISTORY

My name is Mary Chase. I've been here a good many years and seen quite a number of classes come and go but the one particular class I'm going to tell about arrived a few days before we made our acquaintance, on September 4, 1956. There were fifty-seven of them, all bright eyed and eager-wondering what tomorrow would hold for them.

After the round of teas, get-acquainted parties and tours of the city they soon got a pretty good idea of what tomorrow would hold for them. Will they ever forget writing those "Dear Mom" letters in the wee hours before an approaching quiz in anatomy?

Still lost as babes in the woods many of them found Izzie the Staff House maid and others a good mother substitute when their problems got the best of them.

After Christmas every minute of which they had enjoyed to the upmost thinking that this was perhaps their last Christmas at home; they began to feel their way about on the wards a little better. No longer did they have to be told their cleaning assignment after patient care. It was an automatic thing to get rubber gloves, a can of Temp and start scrubbing the "you know what".

Our first year wasn't all work and no play, for on the week-ends the halls were echoing with plans to go to a football game, a dance or a visit to roommate's home town.

In the spring Gladys Harris represented her class at the National Student Nurse's Association in Chicago. With her borrowed bib and cap she was the envy of everyone in the class.

Soon enough, however, capping rolled around and on June 2, 1957, everyone proudly wore their newly acquired caps and bibs.

In the days following they learned a greater meaning of the word "responsibility" for it was the keynote to becoming a good nurse- something they all aspired to be.

The freshman officers were President, Lois Robinson, Vice President, Gladys Harris, Secretary, Faye Daniels and Treasurer, Jo Pat Stokes, and Historian, Bette Thomas.

Junior year, Junior Slump-they seemed synonomous. Call is OR and DR plus weeks upon weeks of evening and night duty left much to be desired. They were too far into nursing to quit but it seemed to far away from it to ever graduate. They have to admit that it was a learning experience from begining to end. The year was brightened for some by their three months psychiatric affiliation at the "Hill". Those carefree days at the Hill gave everyone a new outlook-and a greater appetite. Though they had to walk a country mile to the cafeteria it was worth the walk to have bacon and donuts every morning.

The competent leaders of their junior class were: President, Jo Pat Stokes, Vice President, Gladys Harris, Secretary, Peggy Oakes, Treasurer, Emma Williams, and Historian, Virginia Sykes.

With the graduation of the Seniors they inherited the meaningful black bands and took the place of Seniors themselves. This year was composed of many money making projects, work on the annual, graduation plans and much discussion about future jobs and wedding plans. It all seemed to go so fast that last year I couldn't believe they'd been here almost three years.

As they waved goodbye to me, on the morning after their graduation, I sensed in the air feeling of ambivalance; for even though their coveted goal was now in their possession, yet I'm sure each was reluctant to leave the long friends they'd made during their student days at Watts.

As told to Laura Quinn and Sonya Knight
by Mary Chase

.....LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We, the seniors of 1959, having been drawn forward by the beckoning voice of a world that we must face, standing on the threshold of a new adventure, and realizing that as we go, we leave behind memories to be cherished forever, do linger long enough to glance back and entrust to you who remain to carry on where we left off, some of our dearest possessions.

Article I

To the rising seniors, we leave our cherished black bands in hopes they'll wear them as proudly as we did.

To the rising juniors, we leave the never ceasing evening and night duty with a full bottle of procaine for all the hard knocks they'll receive.

To the faculty and doctors who have guided us so diligently through our three years at Watts, we leave our deepest appreciation, and a bottle of A. S. A. for all the headaches we have caused them.

To the housemothers we leave a quiet and peaceful dorm.

Article II

I, Margaret Cheek, do leave my height to Betty Hammock, so that next year she'll be able to reach the top medicine shelf without using a stool.
I, Nancy Craig, do leave my calorie chart and book "How to Reduce" to Dale Nesbitt who has no need for it.
I, Joy Crumpler, do leave my ability to break hearts, to Jo Ann Warren.
I, Faye Daniel, do leave my stuffed Lion for the real thing.
I, Denise Ellis, do quietly leave, carrying with me memories of the many worldly things I've learned.
I, Barbara Evans, do leave my tiny waist to "Turtle."
I, Connie Foster, do leave my coffee and magazines to Annette Davis.
I, Mary Lou Graves, do leave the "Blue Light" to Melinda Aycock.
I, Janice Harper, do leave to join Wayne, hoping I leave my death jinz behind.
I, Gladys Harris, do leave my love of night duty to Carol McBride.
I, Shirley Humprey, do leave my love of sleep to Margaret Leach.
I, Barbara Jones, do leave my tan to Faye Glascow.
I, Donna Jordan, do leave my accent to Sandra Salter.
I, Sonya Knight, do leave my dramatics to Fran Jenkins.
I, Jean Lambert, do leave my friends to be with my "Buddy".
I, Joyce Lassiter, do leave my natural curley hair to Beverly Shearon.
I, Linda Long, do leave my many clothes to Carolyn Summers.
I, Margaret Mallard, do leave my gift of gab to Judy Freshwater.
I, Peggy Oakes, do leave my cuteness to Frankie Lee.
I, Betsy Parker, do leave my ability to have long fingernails and get away with it to Becky Cobb.
I, Peggy Poole, do leave my stationary to Shirley Calhoun. I have no further need for it.
I, Jerry Quick, do leave my "never-failing winks" at boys to Jane Wiggins.
I, Laura Quinn, do leave my winning ways to Rachel Griffin.
I, Verna Reynolds, do leave my many little chores to anyone who wants to do them.
I, Lois Robinson, do leave my hidaway to anyone who can find it.
I, Annette Roundy, do leave my baby talk to "Ellie" Salmon.
I, Carol Short, do leave my red hair to Nancy Nattress.
I, Frances Smith, do leave my "Einstein Brain" to Margaret Smith.
I, Jo Pat Stokes, do leave my congeniality to Betty Baines.
I, Virginia Sykes, do leave my originality to Edith Bell.
I, Betty Thomas, do leave my medicines to anyone with a place big enough to store them.
I, Joyce Thornton, do leave my "said one time jokes" to Diane Steed.
I, Emma Williams, do leave my personality to Nell O'Connell.
I, Madelyn Winstead, do leave to "See the U. S. A. in my chevrolet".
I, Tonya Yates, do leave to "them thar hills of Tennessee".

Article III

We do hereby appoint as sole executors of this our last will and testament, Miss Barbara Oyler and Mrs. Marie Robeson.
Signed: Peggy Poole.

.....PROPHECY

The U.S.O. is gaily decorated for the festive occasion. Everyone is in uniform, gaily dancing about, small groups laughing and talking. One group stands out from the rest --the faces are very familiar. As I move closer Nancy Craig, pulling Ed by the hand, came out to meet me. As we joined the group I recognized Faye Daniel with Lyen, Peggy Poole with Jerry, and Barbara Evans, showing off her new Captain's bar. Seems that these girls are serving their country in the Army Nurse Corps in order to keep up with husbands who have made a career out of the service.

Attracted by music from the other room I walked into a huge concert hall, filled with formally dressed dignitaries. I see Betsy Parker, Geraldine Quick, Verna Reynolds, Annette Roundy, and Margaret Cheek, all sitting with distinguished men. Betsy has on her famous spike heels and all the girls are intent on Tonya Yates, on stage giving one of her performances on her piano concert tour. Why is she giving a concert in her nurse's uniform?

Moving toward noise from outside, I push open a door and around the kitchen table sit Shirley Humphries, Donna Jordon, Janice Harper, and Barbara Jones. I sat down to chat with them for awhile and soon learned that each of them had married soon after graduation and were now doing full-time nursing at home, occasionally helping out at hospitals and various places where nurses might be needed.

They told me that Denise Ellis went to the Bahama Islands to carry on with her profession.

As I walked out the back door, Connie Foster called to me from a garden. She was dressed in full uniform and was giving a wilting leaf on her giant African Violet an injection of Terramycin. She and Butch were married and living in Washington, D. C. She is one of the head nurses at Washington Memorial Hospital.

She told me that Jo Pat Stokes went on to get her B.S. and M.A. Degrees after graduation from Watts, then moved to New York to take a teaching position at Bellevue.

Lois Robinson is Assistant-Director of the Space-Travel Medical Research Center in Colorado.

Suddenly a black horse gallops toward me. Frances Smith and her daughter, "Bobbie", greet me. Fran is head nurse on a surgical floor at U.N.C.

Fran tells me that Gladys Faye Harris is now president of the State Nurses Association.

Virginia Sykes, of course, is editor of the A. J. N. She does a lot of traveling to foreign countries to study the different nursing problems.

The roaring of the engines on the trans-Atlantic airliner startles me for awhile. It frightens me to think how far we are from the ground. Then Joy Crumpler, in her smart airline hostess uniform sits down beside me. She tells me that she went to an airline hostess school in Wyoming. Since then she has traveled over most of the world.

Joyce Thornton is still climbing the ladder of success. She has attended schools in the northern states and is now the Director of Nurses at a large hospital in Connecticut.

The plane lands in Florida and as I am getting off, Sonya Knight approaches me. How sophisticated she looks as she boards the plane for the Inter-National Council of Nurses Convention, of which she is an outstanding leader, at Geneva, Switzerland.

Linda Long has moved to Greenland, Sonya tells me, with her husband, Ted. She is head of the big medical department with the construction company of which her husband is president. Joyce Lassiter is the Disaster and Civil Defense Administration at Camp Lejeune Naval Hospital. She was married after graduation and moved to Lejeune with her colonel husband.

I hailed a taxi and when I got in the backseat Jean Lambert greeted me. Jean is the nurse for the University of Florida, where her husband is now working.

She told me that Mary Lou Graves was working at Miami City Hospital as head nurse of the Emergency Department.

At the next block Jean left me mumbling something about "little chores to do." The cab driver blew his horn for a car to get out of his way.

I was standing on the deck of the U. S. San Marie Ocean Liner, enjoying the sea breeze and talking to Margaret Mallard. She was on her way to Europe as the Director of the Red Cross Nursing Service.

She told me that Laura Quinn was working closely with my old roommate, Peggy Oakes, at 10 Columbus Circle, New York. It seems they are co-directors of the Public Health Nursing in the U. S.

A supervisor in the O.R. at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Bette Thomas is publishing books on aseptic technique and assisting with various types of operations. Emma Williams is content on her farm in Connecticut with her husband and three children. Madelyn Winstead keeps busy trying to help her husband with his oil business in Texas.

That Margaret was always up on the latest news! I look across the deck of the ocean liner and see two boys dribbling a basketball. The thump-thump of the ball becomes a hum-drum sound in my head.

Thump-thump-thump---all four of my children come running excitedly into my bedroom. Waking me, they remind me this is the day for our family picnic. A day off from my duties at Harris Heating and Air Conditioning business, where I am in charge of the Medical Department, means a picnic at the park. California is such a lovely place for picnics!

Remembering my dream of the night before I wonder----was it a dream at all? Is everything true----will I ever know?

....."ANNIE"

In 1943, there was a senior student at Watts who had no roommate. That year at the State Fair she won a plaster figurehead which she named Annie. When she graduated, she passed "Annie" on to the most deserving and closest roommates in the rising Senior Class. For all these years, this tradition in the Watts School of Nursing has been followed. Annie, who is now battered and patched, was given this year

.....SANTA FILOMENA

Santa Filomena is a senior honorary society whose members are tapped annually at an impressive candle-light ceremony. The qualifications include a student's initiative as a leader, her ability to demonstrate outstanding nursing care, and her achievements toward a higher scholastic standard. Those chosen to represent the society consider it an honor and an inspiration to set an example toward the betterment of the school of nursing, as well as themselves. The Santa Filomena flower is the white lily and its' members may be identified by the minature gold Florence Nightingale lamp they wear.

Each year at Christmas time, it has been the tradition for the student nurses at Watts to go through the hospital singing Christmas Carols, bringing cheer to the patients who remain in the hospital during the season of glad tidings and good cheer. The line of Carolers is always lead by "Florence Nightingale," and the procession makes its way through the hospital covering all the wards. It would be hard to say just who enjoys the singing more - the patients or the nurses.
